Rediscover Life's Simple Pleasures

Red means stop

BARRIE An alleged drunk driver was caught snoozing behind the wheel while waiting for a traffic light to turn green.

Barrie police say they were called to Essa Road and Beacon Hill early yesterday morning after someone spotted a car parked in the intersection.

Police say the driver and his passenger had fallen asleep while waiting for the light to change.

After being woken up by a tow truck driver preparing to tow the vehicle, the driver was arrested for impaired driving.

Take a swipe at the TTC

PAYMENT The TTC is hiring a New York consultant to develop a business case for a system that would let riders tap a credit card on an electronic reader instead of dropping a token in a box.

The $1.3-million contract has been awarded to KMA Group, operated by Paul Korczak, who has worked with the New York and Chicago transit systems. He spoke in Toronto at the TTC's invitation in April.

Korczak has been studying the TTC's fare system and the provincial Presto fare card for the past 16 months, according to a report to city councillors.

The advantage of an open payment system is it is managed by credit card companies so the transit system doesn't have to handle money, says Korczak.

State of emergency

Storm described as 'freight train' creates havoc in Leamington

An intense thunderstorm that ripped through a southwestern Ontario community before daybreak yesterday left dazed residents scrambling to cope with tree-strewn streets and battered homes.

Most of the damage was reported in Leamington, near Lake Erie, where authorities declared a state of emergency three hours after a ferocious windstorm struck a strip of homes, sounding like a freight train to some.

"Scary thing when you wake up at 3 a.m. in the morning, and I thought how can I be hearing a train," said Marilyn Collard, as she described the piercing noise of the storm. "And that's what it sounded like, a train coming down the lake."

Environment Canada said it looked like the area was hit by a combination of a tornado and an equally strong windstorm called a downburst. There were no reports of serious injuries.

Diocese reconciles with gay altar server

Bishop of Peterborough preaches tolerance

As the organ backed a spirited choir, a gay man carried the Eucharist down the aisle of a divided church to the altar — an altar at which he can no longer serve.

It was a sign of reconciliation between a celibate, but openly gay, man and the Diocese of Peterborough, which he had earlier taken to the Ontario Human Rights Tribunal over allegations that his rights were trampled by a bishop and 12 parishioners whose actions, he said, led to his removal from his voluntary role as altar server at St. Michael's Parish of Cobourg.

Moments earlier, James Corcoran, the 51-year old former altar server, sat among those same 12 elderly men and women as they listened to the Bishop of Peterborough preach of the virtues of tolerance.

"Nobody has the right to humiliate or slander their brother and sister," Bishop Nicola De Angelis told the parishioners.

It was a homily that seemed to address the "hateful and discriminatory will" and "distaste towards homosexuality" that Corcoran had alleged to the Human Rights Tribunal was rampant among the 12 men and women who objected to his presence at the altar.

The bishop's homily yesterday morning came a week after his office announced that Corcoran and De Angelis had resolved the human rights dispute at a meeting at the Bishop's Peterborough office. Corcoran has subsequently withdrawn his complaint to the tribunal. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Native group buys 20 community housing homes

REAL ESTATE As real estate deals go, this was a sweet one for the purchaser.

Wigwamen, an aboriginal housing organization, has bought 20 single-family homes from Toronto Community Housing in a deal recently approved by city council.

Instead of purchasing the properties outright — they're estimated to be worth nearly $9 million — Wigwamen will have to pay only about $400,000 in outstanding mortgages.

In late 2008, these properties and nearly 600 other single-family homes owned by the city's community housing agency were at the centre of controversy.

Many are in established neighbourhoods, including the upper Beach, and Broadview-Danforth, their values have risen to close to $500,000 or more each.

That fact raised the ire of a few Toronto councillors, who argued that some of the properties should be sold and the money put toward rent subsidies.

HST debate heats up

The lead up to the July 1 rollout of Ontario's 13 per cent harmonized sales tax is starting to resemble an election campaign, with the Liberal government pushing back hard against opposition claims the HST is "a greedy tax grab."

Shredders destroying thousands of pages of "red tape" regulations for the old provincial sales tax, forklifts delivering petitions with hundreds of thousands of signatures opposing the HST and a giant countdown clock are some of the props being used in the battle.

With people distracted by everything from holidays and the G8-G20 meetings to sports playoffs, the Liberals have the tough task of explaining an entire package of tax reforms.

Standing behind a large paper shredder, Revenue Minister John Wilkinson said the tax changes are all about creating jobs. "We have a plan that's going to lead to 591,000 new jobs over the next 10 years because it will lead to $47 billion worth of more investment," said Wilkinson.

Family condos eyed

Councillor pushing city to zone cheaper units

In the past decade, Toronto's downtown population has exploded by 20 per cent — but families have been moving out.

The 14-and-under population has dropped by almost six per cent, threatening inner-city schools with closure and decreasing economic diversity.

"It's a vicious circle of gentrification that will Manhattanize Toronto," warns Coun. Adam Vaughan (Ward 20, Trinity-Spadina). "We're building condos where people can start families, but can't raise families" since they must leave Toronto to buy more affordable homes, he says.

Vaughan is pushing an amendment to the city's Official Plan that would require 10 per cent of buildings of 100 units or more to be family-sized. Some housing experts say what Toronto really needs is something called "inclusionary zoning," which gives the city the power to make developers build cheaper housing units.

Builders balk at being forced to devote space to larger condos. They contend families won't buy expensive flats when they can get a whole house at similar cost outside the city. Inclusionary zoning, used in more than 40 U.S. jurisdictions, takes a slightly different approach. It allows the city to require that, say, 10 to 20 per cent of a private development be "affordable."

Work to begin on Rexdale's Woodbine Live project this fall

DEVELOPMENT Rexdale's hopes of rising above economic struggle, joblessness and crime — of finally tasting some boom — rose in 2005 with news of a massive entertainment-retail complex coming to Woodbine race track lands. Then, as the 150 acres sat empty, hopes sank.

But construction on the first phase of Woodbine Live — a billion-dollar development, one of the biggest in Toronto ever — is slated to start this fall. Also opening will be an employment centre with a city-negotiated mandate to give north Etobicoke residents first crack at the promised 9,000 new jobs.

Subdivision and site plan agreements with the city are nearing completion, capping complex approvals for a 450-room hotel, a 5,000-seat live performance venue, a big-box retail centre, a movie theatre, smaller upscale shops and bars and restaurants.

Sleep sex common?

The occurrence of sexsomnia — making advances and performing sexual acts while asleep — appears to be more common than once thought.

Researchers have found that almost eight per cent of patients at Toronto's University Health Network sleep disorders clinic reported they initiated or engaged in sexual activity with a bed partner while asleep. The prevalence of sexsomnia was almost three times higher in men (11 per cent) than in women (four per cent). Those with sexsomnia were twice as likely to report using illicit drugs (15.9 per cent versus 7.7 per cent), concluded the study.

While the specific cause of sexsomnia has not been pinned down, sleepiness and sleep deprivation were believed to be factors, as are alcohol consumption and stress.

Tories staying on message

Event proposals reveal extreme political control by PMO

An MP's Sunday afternoon visit to a seniors' home. The federal purchase of powerful new military aircraft. A journalism student's innocuous query about Africa.

One thing connects them all — the Conservative government scripted each event using a potent but little-known communication tool called the Message Event Proposal.

The Canadian Press has obtained almost 1,000 pages of MEPs from several government departments, including the Privy Council Office, under the Access to Information Act. The PCO, the bureaucratic nerve centre of Ottawa, has been conscripted by an increasingly powerful Prime Minister's Office to vet requests for public events across the federal government.

MEP template

- An MEP template typically includes the following subtitles: Event, event type, desired headline, key messages, media lines, strategic objectives, desired soundbite, ideal speaking backdrop, ideal event photograph, tone, attire, rollout materials, background and strategic considerations.

The MEPs have blurred the time-honoured separation of non-partisan public servants and political staffers and sidelined seasoned government communicators, sapping morale across the civil service.

They have become the political tool for literally putting words in the mouths of cabinet ministers, federal bureaucrats, low-profile MPs on the barbecue circuit and seasoned diplomats abroad.

The MEP is the crucial communication instrument for a minority government that values staying on message above all else — a transformation that federal officials and public-policy analysts say is undermining democracy.

While all governments try to control the message, the ambitious sweep of MEPs is unprecedented in federal politics.

"We discussed every single issue and micromanaged every news release — everything," said one former Harper-era PCO official.

"Pretty much any event, or any rollout of an announcement, would have an MEP that would lay out the strategy."

The Prime Minister's Office declined to comment on this story.

G8, G20 security equally high

HUNTSVILLE A leafy country retreat, or a sprawling concrete jungle — security for the two upcoming global summits are equally committed to both.

The Integrated Security Unit says its plans for the G8 summit in Huntsville, Ont., will run parallel to those in place for the G20 meetings in Toronto at the end of June.

"There is no difference in doing the job, it's just the setting is different," said Sgt. Leo Monbourquette, a spokesperson for the unit, which spent yesterday showcasing its extensive plans to secure the Parry Sound-Muskoka region.

Not necessarily maybe

Ignatieff refuses to be pinned down about a coalition

Michael Ignatieff says coalition governments are "perfectly legitimate" and he'd be prepared to lead one if that's the hand Canadian voters deal him in the next election.

But the Liberal leader says it would be disrespectful to voters and damaging to his party to try to strike any deals with the NDP before voters have spoken.

In an exclusive interview with The Canadian Press, Ignatieff dismissed talk of a merger or any sort of election non-compete agreement with the NDP as "absurd."

Pressure has been mounting on Ignatieff in recent weeks to embrace some sort of co-operative arrangement with the NDP, a notion fuelled by tepid poll numbers for the Liberals and the example of the Conservative-Liberal Democrat coalition government installed last month in Britain.

In his first extensive comments on the issue, Ignatieff said he has no problem with the principle of coalition governments.

"But the right way to do it is to run your flag up, (opposing parties) run their flag up, you fight like crazy, you put your choices clearly to the Canadian people, they make their choices and then you play the cards that voters deal you."

Until now, Ignatieff has sent mixed signals about coalitions. The studied ambiguity is designed to put a lid on all the current coalition talk without ruling out the option should it prove necessary after the next election.

Ignatieff was a reluctant signatory to the unpopular 2008 coalition deal struck by then-leader Stéphane Dion with the NDP and Bloc Québécois to topple Stephen Harper's newly re-elected minority Conservative government.

Upon taking over from Dion, Ignatieff briefly maintained the coalition threat — coining the phrase "a coalition if necessary but not necessarily a coalition" — to wring some budget concessions from Harper. But he eventually abandoned Dion's deal and has seemed opposed to the idea ever since. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MS patients launch rights complaint

LEGAL Multiple sclerosis patients in at least two provinces are preparing to launch human rights complaints as they demand access to an unproven treatment that has excited the hopes of people living with the disease and already prompted some to seek the procedure abroad.

A group of patients in British Columbia and another man with the disease in Newfoundland say denying them treatment for a vein condition that's been called chronic cerebrospinal venous insufficiency, or CCSVI, amounts to discrimination.

Jenna Machala, a Vancouver-area realtor who is among the patients preparing a complaint to the B.C. Human Rights Tribunal against the province's Health Ministry, said people living with MS can't afford to wait for governments to give a green light to the treatment.

"We are begging everybody to have a look at us. It's like we are drowning and no one wants to throw us a life jacket," Machala said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

- An Italian doctor recently claimed narrowed neck veins cause or contribute to MS and unblocking them could help treat the disease, but the procedure isn't offered in Canada.

Benefit discriminatory: Family

Tribunal to hear claim from parents of dead, unmarried soldier

The Canadian Human Rights Commission is examining whether Ottawa discriminates against families of single soldiers killed overseas by excluding them from a quarter-million dollar death benefit.

The Canadian Press has learned the agency plans to convene a tribunal hearing some time in the next few months. It will weigh the complaint of an Ontario couple whose son Cpl. Matthew Dinning died in a roadside bomb attack in Kandahar four years ago.

"Married and single soldiers have fought side-by-side in Afghanistan, they wore the same uniform, they died for the same country, the caskets were draped in the same flag, they should be treated the same as far as death benefits go," Lincoln Dinning said in an interview from his Wingham, Ont., home.

"It's a moral and ethical issue. And it's about treating all fallen soldiers the same."

Whenever a married Canadian soldier is killed in action, the surviving spouse and children are eligible for a one-time, $250,000 lump-sum payment meant to help them with the costs of transitioning to civilian life. The cash is on top of whatever life insurance a soldier may carry.

TOM HANSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lincoln Dinning, with his wife Laurie, points to his son Cpl. Matthew Dinning in a photo taken in Afghanistan, at an Ottawa news conference in 2007. The Canadian Human Rights Commission is examining whether Ottawa discriminates against families of single soldiers killed overseas by excluding them from a quarter-million dollar death benefit.

But single soldiers are excluded from the benefit, which was introduced when the Conservative government implemented the new Veterans Charter in 2006.

"This is not about money because $250,000, (nor) $250 million is going to bring any of the soldiers back," Dinning said. "It's about treating all fallen soldiers the same, with dignity and respect, regardless of their marital status."

Under the old system, the federal government paid only a supplementary death benefit, calculated at two times the member's annual earnings. The cash went to the spouse, or another designated beneficiary of the soldier. If there was no beneficiary, the money would go into the estate. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Man ordered to leave Canada after 13 years

VANCOUVER Even after the U.S.-backed death squads had disbanded and peace accords were signed, Jose Figueroa was getting threats on his life and dodging bullets in his native El Salvador.

Allegiance to a revolutionary guerrilla group that fought brutal government forces put a bull's-eye on his back and propelled his flight from the tiny Latin American country.

Thirteen years after starting fresh in the Vancouver area with his wife and three children, Figueroa is in crosshairs again — this time the target of broad Canadian immigration policy that experts say often catches hapless victims in its wide net.

Figueroa, 43, was ordered deported last month because of his self-admitted membership in the FMLN two decades ago, now a political party that governs El Salvador after winning democratic elections in 2009.

THE CANADIAN PRESS/HO

The decision comes as Ottawa tries to push through a controversial refugee reform package that critics say will "politicize" the immigration system and fails to consider the human element of people's claims.

A United Nations' Truth Commission reported 85 per cent of violence during the conflict was by agents of the state, with only five per cent by the FMLN. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oil board lacks environmental expertise, says researcher

ST. JOHN'S A biologist and researcher is asking why none of the six men on the board regulating oil activity off Newfoundland lists environmental expertise as a prime credential.

The head of the Canada-Newfoundland and Labrador Offshore Petroleum Board has stressed that environmental protection is a top goal.

But Gail Fraser of Toronto's York University points out that the board members' online biographies cite little or no related background. "They don't have anybody on the board with environmental expertise that has voting capacity," she said. "They're supposed to be regulating the environment."

The federal-provincial body regulates licences for exploration and production in an area of more than 7.4 million hectares. It has fallen under intense scrutiny as deepsea drilling continues about 400 km northeast of St. John's, N.L., despite the blowout in the Gulf of Mexico. THE CANADIAN PRESS

World Cup brings 'hope, pride': Zuma

President Jacob Zuma, left, yesterday declared South Africa ready for the start of the World Cup and praised the tournament for bringing cohesion to his once divided nation. Five days from the kickoff, Zuma said the nation has not witnessed such enthusiasm and excitement since former president Nelson Mandela was released from an apartheid-era prison in 1990. ## Despite efforts, spilled oil still clogs Gulf

A device that is now sucking up significant amounts of the oil spewing from the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico offered a measure of hope yesterday even as the government's point man on the spill warned problems would persist for months.

Coast Guard Admiral Thad Allen said on CBS television's Face The Nation that the spill, which is ravaging beaches and wildlife, will not be contained until the leak is fully plugged and that even afterward "there will be oil out there for months to come."

The disaster, which began with an oil rig explosion in mid-April, will persist "well into the fall," he said.

The containment cap placed on the gusher near the sea floor trapped about 1.67 million litres of oil Saturday, BP spokesman Mark Proegler said yesterday, up from around 946,000 litres of oil Friday.

It's not clear how much is still escaping; an estimated 1.9 million to 3.8 million litres of crude is believed to be leaking daily. While BP officials registered optimism, government officials monitoring the response to the spill were more cautious, wary of drumming up promises they couldn't deliver on.

Allen said on Fox News Sunday that "we need to underpromise and overdeliver." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada does its part

- Canada is sending half of its ocean boom to the Gulf of Mexico to help U.S. authorities deal with the massive oil cleanup effort. Over the next two days, 3,000 metres of the floating containment system will be trucked to Mobile, Ala., for deployment. Gail Shea, the minister responsible for Canada's coast guard, says Washington's latest call for help came Friday. She says the federal government expects to recover the $3-million cost of the boom this fiscal year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Authorities say tornados and thunderstorms that swept through the U.S. Midwest overnight killed at least five people in Ohio, destroyed 50 homes and damaged a high school gymnasium where a graduation ceremony was to be held yesterday. Fire Chief Todd Walters of Lake Township (Ohio) said several people were taken to hospitals. Authorities are still searching through homes and Walters couldn't say whether anyone is missing. Beth Swartz, above, escaped to safety — along with her husband and 12-year-old son — from their home in Millbury, Ohio, before a tornado destroyed it.

More Quotes = More Savings On Car Insurance

Do You Love Shopping Around For The Best Deal?

If you're like most people, you'll often spend hours doing research, checking flyers, looking for specials, and running from one store to another to make sure you get the best possible price on everyday items such as; clothes, electronics, furniture, and even groceries. Nothing beats the thrill of knowing you paid less for something by shopping at one place instead of the other, right? It all adds up, how much time you invest and knowing where to go to get the best deals could end up saving you a bundle over the long run.

When Was The Last Time You Shopped for Car Insurance?

Sadly, even the smartest shoppers often don't spend nearly the same amount of time and energy shopping for car insurance, as they do for other items. After all, car insurance can be confusing, it never goes "on sale" (it only seems to get more expensive), it isn't much "fun" to buy, and it seems like no one place always has the best prices. But what if one place allowed you to compare rates from over 30 insurance companies? And what if it would only take about 10 minutes? And you could end up saving hundreds or even thousands of dollars? This is where InsuranceHotline.com can help by providing a free, unbiased rate comparison service that can connect you with a licensed insurance broker or agent who has the lowest rate available for your driving profile.

Don't Be Fooled By Others Offering To "Compare Quotes"

Unlike most of its competitors, InsuranceHotline.com does not sell insurance, is not a licensed broker or agent, and is not owned in whole or in part by an insurance company. This allows InsuranceHotline.com to be completely unbiased when providing insurance quotes and keeps its focus solely on finding the lowest insurance rates for consumers. By contrast, most websites offering to "compare insurance quotes" are owned by or affiliated with insurance brokers or agents and are therefore only capable of quoting rates from the limited number of insurance companies they represent, typically no more than 4 or 5.

Rate Comparison

| Driving Record | Lowest Price | Highest Price | Savings |

Activists were looking for a fight: Israel PM

Provocateurs at work, he claims

Israel's prime minister claimed yesterday that the Turkish activists who battled Israeli naval commandos in a deadly clash last week had prepared for the fight ahead of time — boarding the ship separately from other passengers after they organized and equipped themselves.

Benjamin Netanyahu

The comments from Benjamin Netanyahu were the latest in an Israeli campaign to defend its crackdown on Monday that killed nine activists on a flotilla headed to the blockaded Gaza Strip with hundreds of activists and humanitarian supplies on board.

The operation has drawn fierce international condemnation, seriously damaged Israeli ties with Turkey, and brought heavy pressure to lift the three-year-old closure of Gaza.

Netanyahu told his Cabinet that "dozens of thugs" from "an extremist, terrorism-supporting" organization had readied themselves for the arrival of the naval commandos.

"According to the information currently in our possession, this group boarded separately in a different city, organized separately, equipped itself separately and went on deck under different procedures," he said.

"The clear intent of this hostile group was to initiate a violent clash with IDF (Israeli) soldiers."

Netanyahu did not say where the information came from. But Israeli military officials have claimed there is strong evidence that the men who fought the soldiers were hired mercenaries.

The organizers deny the allegations.

Videos released by the army have shown a crowd of men attacking several naval commandos as they landed on a ship from a helicopter, beating the soldiers with clubs and other objects.

The army has displayed pictures of knives, slingshots and metal rods confiscated from the crowd, and other video seized from reporters and security cameras on board the ship appear to show a group of young men brandishing clubs and other weapons ahead of the arrival of the soldiers.

Rise of 'political Islam' poses threat to Christians: Vatican

RELIGION The Vatican said yesterday that the international community is ignoring the plight of Christians in the Middle East, and that the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the war in Iraq and political instability in Lebanon have forced thousands to flee the region.

A working paper released during Pope Benedict XVI's pilgrimage to Cyprus to prepare for a crisis summit of Middle East bishops in Rome in October also cites the "extremist current" unleashed by the rise of "political Islam" as a threat to Christians.

The paper said that the line between religion and politics is blurred in Muslim countries, "relegating Christians to the precarious position of being considered non-citizens, despite the fact that they were citizens of their countries long before the rise of Islam."

"The key to harmonious living between Christians and Muslims is to recognize religious freedom and human rights," it said.

During a lengthy investigation, an NYPD undercover officer recorded conversations with the men in which they spoke about jihad against Americans.

CHILI - the red hot way of losing weight!

Eating chili can make you lose weight by speeding up your metabolism and burning fat, scientists have found. Researchers show that heat generated by the spicy food oxidizes layers of fat as well as increases metabolism.

Now those with sensitive taste buds can also benefit from peppers without having to endure the stinging aftertaste. An equivalent of the main chili ingredient, capsaicin, has been found in a non-spicy variety. This means that we can gain the fat burning effect of chili without the risk of stinging our taste buds or stomachs. This non-spicy version of chili is now found in supplement form.

Clinically proven to burn fat!

Researchers at the University of California studied the effects of chili on the diet after becoming intrigued at the manner in which the spicy fruit makes those who eat them sweat. They fed 34 men and women a low-calorie diet, supplemented with either non-hot version of pepper or placebo pills.

They found that levels of energy expended by those given the highest amounts of capsaicin were almost double those of the subjects who had been given the placebo.

Green tea and chili together is the strongest combination for fat burning

The current best selling natural ingredient for fat loss is green tea. Now studies show that chili and green tea together complement each other and burn more fat than either one alone. Scandinavian manufacturer New Nordic has recently launched their natural product Chili Burn in Canada. The product is based on this research and further adds ginger and dill in the composition. Chili Burn, which is now the no.1 fat burning supplement in Scandinavia, is available in Canada at Shoppers Drug Mart, Loblaws/Superstores/Extra Foods, GNC, and other participating health food stores and pharmacies.

Much still to be done in Haiti: UN official

1.5 million remain homeless in aftermath of quake

The UN's humanitarian chief acknowledged frustration yesterday with the slow progress in providing shelter to the 1.5 million Haitians still homeless because of the Jan. 12 earthquake, and said a large amount of work needs to be done as the hurricane season bears down on the struggling nation.

John Holmes told The Associated Press that the complex process of finding available land for transitional shelters, slow decision-making by the government and new waves of Haitians moving into homeless camps have made responding to the crisis particularly hard.

"We are a bit frustrated that it's taken so long," said Holmes, who is in Australia for a meeting of the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs' donor support group. "We've not been able to build many of these transitional shelters so far.

"We have a lot of things to do ... before we feel we're in a more comfortable situation," Holmes said.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New threat

- The hurricane season began last week and forecasters are predicting it will be an active one, with as many as 23 named tropical storms. Deforestation and erosion have left Haiti particularly vulnerable to flooding and mudslides, and a big storm will create misery for those still living under tarps in flood zones five months after the quake.

Tiananmen protester arrested and released after storming Chinese embassy in Tokyo

ANNIVERSARY Japanese authorities released Wu'er Kaixi, a student leader in Beijing's 1989 Tiananmen pro-democracy protests, yesterday after arresting him for allegedly trying to force his way into the Chinese Embassy in Tokyo on the anniversary of a bloody military crackdown.

The 42-year-old activist, who allegedly jumped over a small steel fence in front of the embassy Friday, was quickly overpowered by Japanese police and arrested.

A Tokyo police spokesman confirmed the release of Wu'er, now a Taiwanese citizen, but declined to give further details. He spoke on condition of anonymity, citing department policy.

Wu'er was No. 2 on China's list of 21 wanted student leaders after the crackdown on the protesters, in which at least hundreds of people were killed. He escaped and has lived in exile in Taiwan, where he has been a businessman and political commentator.

Easing wireless restrictions

Feds looking at loosening foreign ownership regulations

Canada's wireless industry could face more competition if Ottawa launches its anticipated loosening of foreign ownership restrictions and throws open the doors to outside investors.

Analysts widely anticipate that Industry Minister Tony Clement could unveil further details of government plans for changes to ownership in the communications industry during a keynote speech today at the Canadian Telecom Summit in Toronto.

Clement has become the face of potential changes in Canada's wireless industry after making the controversial decision last year to overrule the CRTC, and permit Egyptian-funded cellphone operator Globalive Wireless to open shop in Canada. At that time, Clement said the decision wasn't intended to set a precedent.

However, the move shook up existing telecom regulations — which limit direct and indirect foreign investment to 46.7 per cent — and established a new potential for companies wanting to build a presence in the country.

Clement's plan faces challenges from the industry, regulators and critics who question whether easing restrictions would tighten the noose for existing Canadian companies.

At this point, federal regulators require telecommunications companies to be owned and managed by Canadians, and that includes all cable, satellite and wireless services, as well as television broadcasters. The exception to the rule is that a majority foreign, non-voting stake is permitted.

What the government said it wants to do is alter the foreign ownership rules while maintaining the existing non-voting stake rule. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Calgary-based petroleum giant announced Friday it was closing its refinery after rejecting two final purchase offers. ## Stocks facing a turbulent week

MARKETS The tone on stock markets is expected to be grim this week after investors were reminded in stark terms Friday that the European debt crisis is spreading and U.S. job creation is still woefully weak.

Worries about the pace of a global economic rebound will continue to depress the TSX energy and base metals sectors, both of which are down sharply from highs in April.

Financials will feel the pressure of investors worries about whether the European banking system can withstand big write-downs connected to sovereign debt.

At the least, investors were hoping that a strong U.S. jobs report would deflect worry away from the European debt crisis, which has depressed markets for weeks. But as it turned out, the U.S. Labour Department reported that 430,000 jobs were created last month versus the 517,000 that analysts had expected. But most of the jobs added were for the 2010 U.S. census and private sector job creation came in at only 41,000. THE CANADIAN PRESS

How they fared

- North American markets finished lower for the week, with the TSX down 0.87 per cent and the Dow industrials fell two per cent.

View from a Venetian vaporetto

InTransit

Ed Drass

metronews.ca/intransit

The weather in Venice, Italy, has been warm and sunny. This island city also happens to be the world's most beautiful urban environment. And as you can expect, I'm ignoring such trivialities in order to properly study the local transportation system.

Like many world cities, Venice has a very extensive transit network. However, unlike most places, this lovely, lively open-air museum can only be navigated by foot — and boat. Trains and buses travel from the mainland to the edge of the old city, but no further. After that, you walk. But since the streets are narrow, winding and often crowded, you use vaporetti — translated as ferryboats or waterbuses.

The average vaporetto (the singular form) is much like a bus. It's long, narrow and low enough to pass under Venice's famous bridges. Riders can sit inside, or they stand in open areas near the pilot cabin. Some boats even have exposed seats at the stern — arranged similarly to the rear of a Toronto streetcar.

Riding public transit in Venice, one risks being splashed by other boats — or getting mildly seasick — but I'd say the continuous view of ornate, centuries-old edifices is probably worth it.

Quick tip

- The TTC is doing more late night track work, this week on the University subway line. See ttc.ca.

The network, known by the letters "Actv" does use modern technology. It's even ahead of the TTC in this regard. Digital monitors at most stops (which are T-shaped docks) show departure times for each route. The system map has the same graphics as elsewhere in the world, except these routes travel the Grand Canal and connect scattered isles including the populated barrier island Lido.

Both locals and tourists use electronic fare cards but the latter must pay a premium. A single ride for visitors — valid 60 minutes — costs about $8.50. A day pass costs 18 euros, or almost $24. Residents are charged a similar fare to other Italian cities, where one ride is around $1.50.

Some Venetians have their own boats and rich visitors can afford to cruise the canals by fancy gondola, but everyone else gets around by vaporetto. Docking can be a bit bumpy — however the ride is like none other. Go to www.actv.it to see the Venice transit map.

To visit Toronto's own car-free enclaves, go to www.toronto.ca/parks/island/ and consult the ferry schedule.

Pot club raids help organized crime: Senator

Police have done the Mob and street gangs a favour by cracking down on cannabis clubs, say pot decriminalization advocates.

They warn people will now be buying their stuff from criminal networks instead of tax-paying businesses.

Thirty-five people were arrested in raids on Quebec's so-called "compassion clubs" — storefront outlets operating in plain view — while 90 kilograms of cannabis were also seized Thursday.

Those clubs in Montreal and Quebec City offered a wide selection of marijuana for about $10 per gram to customers who claimed a medical condition and provided a doctor's note.

Police argue that the clubs were selling to healthy people and essentially were drug-trafficking operations.

Senator Pierre Claude Nolin says users of medicinal marijuana are now forced to find it elsewhere, and the vast majority will wind up getting it from criminal gangs.

After making the arrests, police themselves declared the clubs had no connection to criminal gangs.

"It's the most disastrous consequence of the whole operation," said Nolin, a longtime advocate for relaxed drug laws.

"The vast majority will have to look at the black market ... and the substance on the black market is not exactly the quality substance that are received in the clubs."

He says research suggests there are roughly one million Canadians who say they smoke cannabis for medical purposes, while less than 5,000 such permits have been issued by Health Canada. That means, he says, the vast majority will have to find their supply elsewhere.

An official for the federal Justice Department said there would be no comment on the cases. All questions were referred to Health Canada.

The Health Canada website says that, as of June 2009, 4,029 people had authorization to possess dried marijuana for medical purposes and 2,360 were allowed to cultivate or produce it.

A pie chart indicates the largest number of permits — 1,631 — were issued in Ontario, followed by 1,008 in British Columbia. Nova Scotia was third with 491, followed by Quebec with 305.

Allen's threes help Celtics even series

(Series tied 1-1)

Celtics 103 Lakers 94

The Boston Celtics evened the NBA finals with Ray Allen shredding the Lakers from the three-point line — and Rajon Rondo doing everything else from everywhere else.

Allen scored 27 of his 32 points in the first half with a record-setting three-point shooting display, Rondo completed a triple-double down the stretch and the Celtics handed the Los Angeles Lakers their first home loss of the postseason, 103-94 last night in Game 2.

Allen hit a finals-record eight three-pointers in a dazzling effort for the Celtics, including seven before halftime. Rondo then took charge after Allen cooled down, racking up 19 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists in his fifth playoff triple-double.

"An entire team effort," Rondo said. "Ray carried us through the first half. Second half, we got in a little slump but we stuck with it, stayed together and got a victory." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Victory over Philly brings Chicago closer to ending Cup drought

(Chicago leads series 3-2)

Flyers 4 Blackhawks 7

Dustin Byfuglien scored two goals and had two assists as the Chicago Blackhawks got off to a quick start and beat the Philadelphia Flyers 7-4 last night for a 3-2 lead in the Stanley Cup final.

Brent Seabrook added a power-play goal and Dave Bolland, Kris Versteeg, Patrick Kane and Patrick Sharp also scored for the Blackhawks.

Chicago can capture the Stanley Cup for the first time since 1961 with a victory Wednesday night in Philadelphia in Game 6. A Flyers win would send the series back to Chicago for a decisive Game 7 on Friday night.

All five wins in the series have come on home ice.

Scott Hartnell, Kimmo Timonen, James van Riemsdyk and Simon Gagne scored for the Flyers. Gagne's goal with 2:36 left made it 6-4, but a half-minute later Byfuglien converted an empty-netter.

After two straight losses in Philadelphia, a return to the United Center invigorated the Blackhawks as did some line mixing by coach Joel Quenneville.

The Blackhawks blitzed Flyers goalie Michael Leighton with three goals in the final 7:43 of the first period and the United Center erupted as Chicago quickly found the offensive game that had helped it make the final.

Leighton was pulled — for the second time in the series in favour of Brian Boucher — after giving up three goals on 13 shots in the first period.

Trailing 3-0, the Flyers wasted little time in getting one of the goals back as Ville Leino took the puck to side of the net and tried to stuff it in. But after hitting goalie Antti Niemi, the puck sat just off the line before Hartnell came in and knocked it home just 32 seconds into the period.

Kane, who had been with Byfuglien on a struggling Blackhawks first line that Quenneville split up, got his second goal of the final on a nice pass from Andrew Ladd. Ladd had his shot blocked by Chris Pronger, recovered the puck and passed it to Kane. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jays fail to sweep Yankees as relief pitchers cough up late lead

MLB RESULTS

New York 4 Toronto 3

This was a time for the Toronto Blue Jays to put their foot on the throat of their opponents, with a sweep on the table, and victory six outs away after seven hard-fought innings.

Instead, they let up just a little and in what seemed like an instant, their lead was gone and a whole new set of questions about the bullpen was upon them. A four-run rally in the eighth inning gave the New York Yankees a 4-3 victory, allowing them to salvage one of three games over the weekend.

It was a tough-to-swallow loss for the Blue Jays (33-25), who fell apart after playing so well in wins Friday and Saturday, and wasted seven brilliant innings from a dominant Brandon Morrow before a crowd of 33,622.

Morrow silenced the Yankees (35-22) through seven on four hits and a walk but was pulled in the eighth after he hit leadoff batter Francisco Cervelli in the shoulder. On came Scott Downs (1-5), who promptly hit Brett Gardner before surrendering an RBI double to Derek Jeter, and just that quickly it was ticking time bomb time.

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jason Frasor came in and got Nick Swisher on a check swing — manager Joe Girardi got ejected arguing the call — before Mark Teixeira was walked intentionally to load the bases for Alex Rodriguez. The move actually paid off when he struck out, but not before a wild pitch brought home Gardner with the tying run.

On the verge of escaping level, Frasor completed the implosion when he served up a two-run single to Robinson Cano that put the Yankees up 4-2.

Rafael Nadal is greeted after winning the men's final match yesterday in the French Open tennis tournament at the Roland Garros stadium in Paris.

Nadal back in form

With health woes behind him, wins fifth French Open

Scurrying along the baseline as only he can, sliding through the red clay he rules, Rafael Nadal stretched to somehow dig the ball out of a corner and fling it back over the net — once, twice, three times — during a 14-stroke exchange that ended when Robin Soderling sailed a shot long.

The French Open final was all of seven points old, and the message was unmistakable: Nadal's knees are fine now, which means he is an entirely different player than the one Soderling stunned at Roland Garros in 2009. That was the first loss of Nadal's career at this tournament, and it remains the only one.

His body sound, his mind at ease, Nadal played his unique brand of relentless, perpetual-motion tennis to handily beat the No. 5-seeded Soderling of Sweden 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 yesterday. Nadal won his fifth French Open championship, his seventh Grand Slam title overall, and earned a return to No. 1.

"I lost last year because I was not well-prepared, and I had very low morale last year, as well," said Nadal, who will supplant Roger Federer atop the rankings today.

"But this time, I'm back," said Nadal, who covered his face with a red towel and sobbed at match's end. "I'm back — and I win."

Yes, Nadal most definitely is back, and he is as good as — or perhaps even better than — ever.

"He has more or less one game," Soderling said, "but he does it so well."

Nadal is 38-1 over his career at Roland Garros and, three days after his 24th birthday, stands just one French Open title shy of Bjorn Borg's record of six. For the second time in three years, Nadal won the tournament without losing a set.

As former No. 1 Andy Roddick posted on Twitter: "rafa nadal best ever on clay ... period."

Nadal's uncle, Toni, who has coached the Spaniard since he was four, called yesterday's performance "one of the best matches I've ever seen Rafael play."

English golfer Rose captures first PGA Tour victory

MEMORIAL Justin Rose joined the English revival in golf yesterday, rallying from a four-shot deficit to win the Memorial with a flawless final round for his first victory in seven years on the PGA Tour.

It was the second straight year the Memorial winner came from four shots behind. Tiger Woods did it a year ago, and the 29-year-old Rose was equally impressive. He played bogey-free at Muirfield Village for a 6-under 66 and a three-shot victory over Rickie Fowler.

Rose tapped in for par, thrust his fist in the air and slammed it down, a moment long overdue. Even his one-year-old son Leo approved. As Rose held him aloft in his arms, the infant clapped his hands.

ANDY LYONS/GETTY IMAGES

Justin Rose holds up his trophy after winning the Memorial.

"I've had a few close calls over time, and you start to sometimes wonder why you can't get it done," Rose said.

It was his 162nd start in PGA Tour events, dating to that memorable performance he turned in as a 17-year-old amateur when he tied for fourth at Royal Birkdale in the 1998 British Open.

Fowler, the 21-year-old rookie trying to become the youngest winner on the course Jack Nicklaus built, fell apart briefly on the back nine to fall three shots behind, and never caught up. He closed with a 73 to finish runner-up for the second time this year.

Rose ran off three straight birdies to make the turn, saved par with a 20-footer on the 10th to keep his momentum, then seized control over the next hour despite making only one birdie.

Jays will be shooting for stars in draft

BASEBALL The story has been repeated many times within baseball's chattering classes, and a version of it can also be found in the 2004 book, Chasing Steinbrenner.

Andrew Tinnish, then a young scout for the Toronto Blue Jays, was relaying coverage plans ahead of the 2003 draft to J.P. Ricciardi that included watching little to no high school action.

"That a boy," Ricciardi, the general manager at the time, is quoted by author Rod Bradford as saying in his reply to Tinnish. "If you've got absolutely nothing else going on, go to a mall or to a beach. Then, if you have nothing else going on, go to a high school game."

Tinnish shakes his head when it's brought up now.

"I don't remember it being quite so dramatic," he said. "But it was clear back then that our emphasis wasn't on high school players."

Over time Tinnish has became convinced of the flaws in that approach, and when he begins making picks in his first draft as amateur scouting director today, tomorrow and Wednesday, the Blue Jays will have an entirely different mindset.

The emphasis will be on choosing players with "tools" — scouting vernacular for pure skill — rather than safer, more easy to project collegians. The Blue Jays want to draft players with superstar potential, and are willing to shoulder the potential of more bust picks to get them.

They'll have ample opportunity, with four of the first 41 picks (11, 34, 38, 41) and nine of the first 113, the range where most of the top talent is found.

"The way we look at it is we'll take a risk on a player that we feel has a chance to be a star," Tinnish explained. "Maybe it's a 20 per cent chance to be a star versus a 75 per cent of another player being any every day player.

"I think that the every day player on our scale, which is let's say the 50s, the 55s in the system we use, those players are easier to get through trades, free agency or minor-league free agency, whereas the players who are 70s and 80s are a lot tougher to get.

"I'm not saying they're out there, but that's what we're shooting for."

Cleaner, greener future for truckers

Emission standards driving new generation of truckers to be cleanest ever on Canadian roads

BEN KNIGHT
for Metro Canada

Many Canadians see transport trucks as a necessary evil. Necessary, because just about any product you buy anywhere likely spent part of its journey to market on a truck. Evil, because of the noise, highway congestion, dust, vehicle size, pollution ....

Well, maybe not pollution. Changes in emission standards in both Canada and the United States, coupled with innovative new technologies, have made the latest generation of big rigs — by far — the cleanest ever seen on our highways.

MICHAEL STRAVATO/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Today's trucks are using GPS along with other technologies to help curb dirty emissions.

"Smog emission has been completely and successfully dealt with," says Paul R. Landry, president and CEO of the British Columbia Trucking Association.

"If you were to look at a new truck back in '98 or '99, you'd see smoke coming out of the stack. Every time the gas pedal went down, there'd be this puff of absolutely black smoke. Today's trucks are extremely clean. You could go into Los Angeles with a 2010 truck, and it would take dirty air, clean it, and put it right back in circulation."

That covers just about all dirty emissions — particulates, carbon monoxide — that haze up cities and irritate people's lungs and eyes. And, as anyone who lives near a well-travelled road knows, also leaves a layer of dirt on windows, walls and even furniture.

Still an issue, though, is the emission of greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide. "Unfortunately, the contradiction we've been faced with is that, until 2010, the technology that focused on reduced smog emissions has caused us to actually consume more fuel," Landry concedes. "When we put on those particulate traps in 2007, it added weight to the truck, and caused an increase in energy consumption."

Green tech driving change

The answer? Greater fuel efficiency. And there are many ways to achieve that.

"There are technologies that can be deployed in terms of aerodynamics and anti-idling devices," Landry notes. "Similarly, a well-trained driver can reduce your fuel consumption by 10 to 15 per cent. We can use GPS to ensure we've got our routing right, and keep our trucks are as full as possible to reduce the number of trucks that need to be on the road. All of those things are happening."

All of this costs money, of course. And even though fuel savings cover most upgrade costs in under two years, Landry says his industry could really use some outside help.

"We'd like to have a greater partnership with government in terms of providing access to that capital," he concludes. "When you have to spend that extra $20,000 to $30,000 on a tractor for aerodynamics or an anti-idling device, getting your hands on that capital is really a challenge."

Trucking changes

- Think you're seeing an enormous amount of truck traffic on Highway 401? You are! The Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, across Ontario and through Toronto, is the busiest truck route in the world – exceeding even the famed Brooklyn Bridge into Lower Manhattan. Fully 40 per cent of trade between Canada and the United States uses this road.
- The Alberta government announced last week it is offering up to $30,000 in rebates for truck owners and small-to-midsize operators adopting fuel-efficient technologies. The $2-million program assists with the acquisition of aerodynamic aids, devices that reduce idling time, and specially designed hybrid trucks – all designed to reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the province's transportation industry.

A globetrotting Tupperware queen

OddJobs

Diane Peters

Metronews.ca/oddjobs

Through Tupperware comes a dream vacation? When Jennifer Schultz, pictured, first became a Tupperware salesperson, she did not expect that it would eventually lead to a trip to Argentina, right.

Jennifer Schultz went from burping babies to burping Tupperware. This was not her plan. The native of Kitchener, Ont., studied early childhood education and taught in Montessori school.

After getting married and having two kids and settling in nearby Waterloo, Schultz decided she wanted to be a stay-at-home mom. When her youngest was three years old, in 2005, she went to a Tupperware party at a friend's house, she even agreed to hold her own.

Her first party raked in $1,000 — a success — but when salesperson offered her a kit to run her own parties, she only halfheartedly agreed:

"I was a bit embarrassed at first. It wasn't cool. I'd done things in my life. Me, a Tupperware lady?"

She began hosting parties a few nights a week. The time demand was minimal and the products sold themselves: Along with plastic containers, the company offered knives, kitchen linens, teas and pots and pans. But she often lost heart and wondered how anyone ever made real money at the job.

About 10 months later, and after almost giving up a few times, she realized that she could be a lot more successful if she didn't just focus on selling Tupperware, but tried as well to recruit new salespeople.

Schultz's sales force grew and soon she began getting rewards from the company — including trips to Disney World and Argentina, as well as a new convertible.

She now has 60 sales representatives who pay her a portion of their sales. Some she recruited from parties, others through her website, many of whom live far enough away that she's never met them.

For those who do live nearby, she holds regular meetings to offer selling tips. Schultz also regularly meets and talks with other Tupperware salespeople to keep her own skills sharp.

Her workday begins at 9:30 a.m., when her kids are at school. At least three nights a week she's out to run parties or attend meetings. It adds up to about 20 hours a week, which suite her and her kids just fine: "Every time I do something on the weekend, it bothers me."

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

The Lowdown

Job title: Tupperware salesperson.
Salary: From $1,300 a month; star directors like Schultz make around $40,000.
Education/training: Constant training through Tupperware and others salespeople on conference calls, through webinars and at conferences.
Best Part of the Job: "The flexibility and the pay."
Worst Part of the Job: "Managing people across the country when I have never met them."

Crash course to avoid a crisis

BookReview

Crisis Economics

Author: Nouriel Roubin and Stephen Mihm
Publisher: The Penguin Press
Price: $35.00

CRAIG LUND
for Metro Canada

Given we are starting to glimpse the light at the end of this gruelling tunnel referred to by some as the Great Recession, the general population has settled with the conclusion that this crisis — as it was — is an anomaly.

According to authors Nouriel Roubin and Stephen Mihm, crises are a natural occurrence, with far more predictability than is realized.

"Crises, we argue, are neither the freak events that modern economics has made them seem nor the rare 'black swans' that other commentators have made them out to be" says Roubin and Mihm.

Cobbled together as part history lesson, current case study and crystal ball gazing, Crisis Economics lays out a number of global examples of financial collapse including the speculative bubble in tulips in Holland in the 1630s, the South Sea Bubble of 1720 and, of course, the Great Depression of the 1930s amongst others.

What I found especially helpful was the explanation of financial jargon that the authors argue even some economists don't quite understand. You've heard the buzz words — designed to make simple things seem more complicated than they need be. "Moral hazard, leverage, bank run, regulatory arbitrage, current account deficit, securitization, deflation, credit derivative, credit crunch and liquidity crunch, to name a few."

Other than the fact that as a public we are recession fatigued, as the old adage goes: Those who don't know history are destined to repeat it — this is the book we all hope our money managers and politicians have read or plan to read.

Jewel still shines

Success allows singer to call the shots

NICK KREWEN
for Metro Canada

Sweet and Wild, out tomorrow, might be Jewel's latest album released under the country music banner, but don't expect the 36-year-old singer and songwriter to stylistically pigeonhole herself.

All you need to do is look at her nine-album catalogue to truly appreciate her diversity: there's the folkish-pop sound of her 1995 12-million selling debut Pieces Of You; the dance-rhythm orientation of 2003's 0304; and last year's intimately stark, acoustic Lullaby.

"I see it all as the same," Kilcher told Metro Saturday from Florence, Ind., where she's part-way through a tour that won't hit Canada until 2011.

"To me it seems so natural: If you go into your closet, you might own sweatpants and a business suit and golfing clothes — but they all belong to the same person.

"It's a three-dimensional reflection of me. I'm p—y, acerbic and sarcastic, but I'm also very earnest, sincere and poetic."

And make no mistake: it's Jewel who calls the shots, ever since the mind-boggling success of Pieces Of You — propelled by the Top 10 hits Foolish Games, Who Will Save Your Soul and You Were Meant For Me — made her financially comfortable for life.

Sweet and Wild is out tomorrow

"My first album really gave me freedom because it made me so much money that I never really had to have a hit again," she explains. "And so, instead of feeling all this pressure — like how am I going to follow this up and have bigger hits — it took pressure off me.

"I felt like I can just have fun for the rest of my life," she laughs. "As long as I'm smart with my money."

So Jewel has a simpler objective these days. "My goals in life are to hopefully have longevity and continue to focus on the craft and get better at writing."

For Sweet and Wild, Jewel took a different tact: she invited some of Nashville's top songwriters to write at the Texas ranch she shares with her rodeo champion husband, Ty Murray.

"Stay Here Forever (her current single) and What You Are are two songs I got from those sessions," she says.

Jewel says the 11 songs on Sweet and Wild "showcase both sides of my personality."

"I like to read poetry and sit under trees, but I also ride my motorcycle, shoot guns and smoke a cigar if there's a good one around."

Sweet and Wild is the new album from Jewel.

Bollywood Oscars shine despite opposition

Hit comedy film 3 Idiots starring superstar Aamir Khan took home most of the awards on offer at the annual Bollywood Oscars on the weekend, including best Indian movie.

The film directed by Rajkumar Hirani that revolves around the lives of three engineering students won 16 out of 31 awards, including best director, at the International Indian Film Awards held in Sri Lanka's capital, Colombo, on Saturday.

Kareena Kapoor, who starred in 3 Idiots, shared the best actress award with Vidya Balan who was in Paa, a film about a 12-year-old suffering from progeria, a rare, genetic disease that causes rapid aging.

Toronto will host the 2011 IIF Awards

The best actor award went to Bollywood icon Amitabh Bachchan, who played the child in Paa.

Bachchan, the International Indian Film Awards' brand ambassador, was not at the awards ceremony. Neither were other big Bollywood names Aamir Khan and Shah Rukh Khan. All said they had prior commitments.

They and other Bollywood stars had been asked to boycott the event by some actors and directors from the Indian state of Tamil Nadu, who alleged Sri Lankan forces killed ethnic Tamil civilians in the war last year.

Sri Lanka's military defeated Tamil Tiger rebels who had fought for a separate homeland for minority Tamils, who have family and cultural links with the people of Tamil Nadu.

Pixies cancel Tel Aviv gig

The U.S. rock band Pixies has cancelled a concert in Tel Aviv this week in the wake of Israel's deadly raid on a Gaza-bound aid flotilla. The band did not specify why it was pulling out of the gig, but organizers say the decision was related to last week's naval raid, which killed nine pro-Palestinian activists. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Re-connecting with Internet ghosts

Socialite

Rea McNamara

metronews.ca/socialite

When I'm feeling nostalgic — or you know, workcrastinating — I sometimes lurk on ghost town social networks, riffling through the old profiles of online-only friends I lost touch with.

They exist in the past-tense: they last logged in three or four years ago, so their profiles are now littered with outdated comments and "403 Forbidden" images. Even though they might of been a Friendster connection that eventually became listed on my Myspace Top 16 "Friend Space," they somehow never migrated to Facebook, or more likely, allowed that particular online version of themselves — whether as a Myspace party promoter or Livejournal mommy blogger — to no longer be updated.

It was strange then when I recently reconnected on Tumblr with a Livejournal-era Internet "friend" — a Virginian musician and writer who wrote scroll upon scroll entries on hardcore punk, his band, and that novel that was always in-progress.

"Yes, there was a time that I listed as interests The O.C. and 'pirates!'"

I should point out too that the ghost town social networks I lurk upon contain my own expired identity productions, fixed by different aliases and dated user info. (Yes, there was a time that I listed as interests The O.C. and "pirates!".)

Of course, I clicked on the "Follow" Tumblr button, and a day later, received an emailed notification that he was following me. And just like that, we were back to being regular Internet friends, the irregular Livejournal comments now replaced by irregular "likes."

Low and behold, this latest iteration of my Internet friend — no longer oh-so Livejournal lengthy — is relatively the same guy. He's regular with music posts, whether it's analyzing the chugging metal guitars on a Rihanna track or Henry Rollins' creepy crawl spider tattoo. Even though we abandoned our past online selves, we've re-connected on a different social networking platform. But if we lose touch again, I won't necessarily be a sad faced emoticon — our following one another is fleeting and tenuous. After all, you can never "like" button friendship.

Hornby faithful to rock

High Fidelity author sticks to familiar themes in latest bestseller

AURELIE SARROT
for Metro World

London author Nick Hornby has scored his sixth bestseller with his new novel Juliet Naked. The book revisits all the familiar Hornby themes of rock 'n' roll, love and obsession.

Q Where did the idea for Juliet Naked come from?

A I read this interview of Sly Stone who hadn't spoken publicly for a long time and the excitement of the journalist, who was very likely a fan, was so obvious and palpable that I wanted to do something with it. Then I was fascinated with the way the Internet deals with the relation between artist and fan. Juliet Naked is a mix of all those things.

Q Does Juliet Naked hark back to High Fidelity?

A The character of Tucker Crowe wasn't meant to be a musician. He could have been a writer or a painter, but I think it's more interesting for everybody, and especially for me to have him being a musician. The book is based on art and the meaning it can have upon different people.

Q Has the music changed since High Fidelity?

A Of course, everything has changed since High Fidelity. Today is the best period in history for music lovers. You can have millions of tunes in your computer, you can discover genius on the web, you can listen to stuff that has never been released on an LP, you can meet other fans that live in other parts of the world… what else can a fan ask for?

Author Nick Hornby spins another tale of love, loss and music.

Q Juliet Naked is the name of the long-awaited album — and also the title of the book. What made you decide to give both the same name?

A I think the word "naked" next to a girl's name always has some effect! And even more when it's next to Juliet — it sounds so classical and romantic.

Q In the couple Annie and Duncan, you portray a fairly bleak picture of love and what can happen to committed relationships.

A She wants a kid, he doesn't. They got bored, but they didn't realize it and after 15 years waiting for something that was never going to come, they realize it's too late. But things do improve.

Strangers With Candy
If you didn't care for Amy Sedaris' lewd, crude and rude cable sitcom about a 40-something ex-con who goes back to high school, you'll definitely dislike this 2005 feature film. But even if you loved the series, you may find the movie disappointing. Like Mary Katherine Gallagher, Stuart Smalley and other television characters who bombed on the big screen, Sedaris' Jerri Blank is better taken in small doses. 9 PM on PIX

Lie to Me
Fans of this underrated drama starring Tim Roth as human lie detector Dr. Cal Lightman have had to put up with some frustrating programming moves by the network, but Fox isn't lying to you this time: The show is back with a batch of new episodes, and it's even been picked up for another season. 8 PM on GTV FOX

CSI: Miami
We heard her act was red hot, but this is ridiculous. When a beloved musician literally bursts into flames during a concert, the CSIs expose the dark side of pop music stardom in "Show Stopper." 10:01 PM on CTV CBS

Conviction in Dunst case

HANDBAG HEIST ENDS WITH JUSTICE FOR SPIDEY'S LEADING LADY It was a real-life remake, with a different ending.

A mechanic was convicted Friday of burglary in the theft of Kirsten Dunst's $2,000 designer purse and actor Simon Pegg's cellphone and other items from a chic hotel, a 2007 heist that forced the co-stars to twice play the part of witnesses.

James Jimenez, who said he just tagged along on what he thought was a co-defendant's legitimate errand, was convicted of trespassing after a trial last fall. But that jury deadlocked on the more serious burglary charge, spurring a retrial that brought the actors back to the witness stand this week.

Their roles were simple: They explained that their possessions disappeared from a SoHo Grand Hotel penthouse suite they were using as a lounge during filming for How to Lose Friends & Alienate People, and that they didn't know the men they later saw ambling around the penthouse floor on surveillance video.

Regretting her words

FISHING FOR SYMPATHY WITH INSENSITIVITY... PROBABLY NOT WISE Kristen Stewart is feeling remorse over her choice of words in comparing being followed by paparazzi to being raped. "I really made an enormous mistake," tells People magazine.

"I'm really sorry about my choice of words. I've made stupid remarks before, and I've always reasoned, 'Whatever. They can think what they want.'"

But the last thing Stewart wants is for anyone to think she takes violence against women lightly. "People thinking that I'm insensitive about this subject rips my guts out," she says."

Still sad about his divorce

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE It may have been four years since they split, but Ryan Phillippe is still having trouble getting over his divorce from Reese Witherspoon.

"I still have sadness about my divorce," he says, according to Hollyscoop. "But my aim is always to progress — to be a better father, a better boyfriend, a better friend, a better actor. My goals are to improve in all areas of life. If you're fearful and you're closing yourself off from potentially wonderful or beautiful additions to your life, that's not going to lead anywhere positive." METRO WORLD NEWS

Love is not all they need

NOT ANOTHER REALITY SHOW ABOUT SUPERFICIALITY! It looks like the real reason Spencer Pratt and Heidi Montag separated last week was because the couple had simply run out of money, sources tell Radar Online.

"They were definitely in the hole at the end of last season. Their business manager was calling the house every day. They were tripping over their funds," a source tells the website. Pratt's spending is reportedly out of control, with he himself admitting he's spent as much as $500,000 on spiritual crystals this year.

Montag is reportedly shopping a new reality series that focuses on her life separated from Pratt.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Russian Borscht

INGREDIENTS:

6 medium-size beets with tops
2 cups finely-shredded spinach
2 tbsp butter
1 large onion, chopped
5 cups low-sodium beef broth
540 ml can chopped tomatoes, undrained and cut up
2 tsp dried marjoram
1 tsp salt
1 tsp dried dill weed
1/2 tsp black pepper
2 cups shredded cabbage
2 cups bite-size pieces cooked beef or pork
2 tbsp vinegar
1 tbsp sugar

METHOD:

1. Trim leaves from beets, leaving 2.5 cm of stem attached. In 6-litre Dutch oven, cover beets with lightly salted water. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 45 minutes or until tender; drain. Cool slightly. Peel beets by slipping off skins while still warm. Cut beets into 3.5 cm x 0.5 cm sticks. Measure 4 cups.

2. In same pot, melt butter over moderately high heat. Add onion and cook 5 minutes or until tender.

3. Add spinach broth, tomatoes, marjoram, salt, dill weed and pepper. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 5 to 10 minutes or until spinach is tender. Stir in cabbage, beef, vinegar and sugar. Carefully stir in cooked beets. Simmer, covered, 5 to 7 minutes more or until heated through.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Just because something is fashionable does not mean you have to believe in it or follow it slavishly. Question everything you are told today.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
It is important to know why friends and colleagues think and act in certain ways. Pay attention.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
You know that something drastic needs to be done and it is around the middle part of the week that good intentions will easily be translated into action.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
There are only so many hours in a day and so many days in a week, so use your time wisely and make the most of your talents.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
Keep things simple today, especially when dealing with financial matters. Also, don't be afraid to speak the truth as you see it.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
The direct approach is the best approach today, and that applies as much to your job or career as it does to affairs of the heart.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
What you fear the most is what you most likely have least to fear. Does that knowledge make you feel any better? If not, don't worry about it.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
You will be thinking deeply about your place in the world this week, and that's good. But don't go so deep that you lose sight of the sky.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
Someone in a position of authority is about to make you a remarkably good offer. Is it too good to be true? Make it your business to find out.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
You've had more than your share of false starts lately and it may not be until next month that you feel you are back in control of your life.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
If you rely on what others say today you may regret it later on, especially if what they say goes against your own instincts.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
You can talk yourself in to or out of any situation right now, but that is not an excuse to go looking for trouble.
